3

A. Read the conversation and answer the questions.

Takuya is still in elementary school, but he already has a dream. In the future, he wants to be a nurse. When he was a small child, he was sick in the hospital. His doctor usually came to visit him one time every day. Takuya talked to his doctor for a short time. On the other hand, Takuya has more memories of his nurses. They came to visit him several times a day. They brought him his meals. They were very kind. They took good care of him. “Doctors have an important job, but A,” he thought.

Takuya talked about his dream with his mother and his father. His father said, “When I was a boy, my parents always told me that boys became doctors, and women became nurses. It was  B for women to get into medical school, so very few became doctors. Today it’s not  C for women to be doctors and men to be nurses. In fact, until about 20 years ago, the Japanese word for nurse was kangofu, and the kanji for nurse meant that it is a job for a woman. They later changed kangofu to  D , so it can now be a job for men and women.” Takuya’s parents knew that Takuya would be a good nurse. They looked at different school and decided to apply to Josai Junior High School because Josai University has some strong medical programs. He has a good chance to study science and other important classes.
